ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

An accurate inventory of manufacturers in North Carolina is vital to the economic strength of our State. Information on our manufacturing sector is used in the distribution of the goods and services produced by our firms. Investment and production opportunities are located. And even more important, our current industrial mix can be examined and priorities for future economic growth established.

The North Carolina Department of Labor and Commissioner Frank Crane have put forth tireless efforts for 36 years in compiling and publishing the previous editions of North Carolina Directory of Manufacturing Firms. The Department of Natural and Economic Resources appreciates the assistance rendered by the Labor Department in the transfer of this responsibility to the Division of Commerce and Industry.

This directory contains 7,892 manufacturing and mining operations. Your cooperation in supplying detailed information on your plant operations and the help of Chambers of Commerce and local development organizations made possible this comprehensive directory.

The Division of Commerce and Industry acknowledges our gratitude for these efforts, and we solicit your suggestions and assistance for the future.

Thomas B. Broughton
Administrator

THE INDUSTRIAL DATA SYSTEM

This directory results from a new effort by Commerce and Industry to continuously catalogue important information on North Carolina's manufacturing community. Other than the typical information on names, addresses, and products; we are now collecting data on quantities of both products and purchases, on areas of marketing, on processes, and on special capabilities. The questionnaire in the back of this directory illustrates how we collect this and other data.

This great volume of information is handled on electronic data processing equipment. The system makes it possible to provide retrieval in almost any manner required, so long as confidential information is not disclosed. Besides locating suppliers and customers, areas of the state (regions, counties, and even postal zones and telephone exchanges) can be analyzed as to product flows. Locating North Carolina suppliers for new domestic and export opportunities, placing government and private contract work in the State, and pinpointing firms for specific technology transfer and training programs can all be furthered through this information system.

We plan to update this information annually, and the Department of Natural and Economic Resources solicits your cooperation in this effort. For additional copies of the questionnaire, or for assistance in any of these related areas, please contact:

EXPLANATION OF LISTINGS

This directory lists manufacturing and mining establishments in North Carolina in 3 ways — alphabetically; by product grouping; by county and by city within counties. In each case, firms are listed alphabetically by parent company.

The county listings (geographic guide) contain the complete available directory information on each firm. This includes the plant's location, its headquarters location, name of parent company and city, chief executive and title, the year established, phone number, employment range, product codes and verbal description, purchases, and date of data collection. The alphabetic guide shows the address, city, county and region. The product guide lists the mailing address and verbal product descriptions, by the Standard Industrial Classiciation (SIC). All three listings indicate whether there are export or import activities, and if a plant is proposed (P) but incomplete.

Plants are listed in counties of actual location, regardless of mailing address. For example, High Point mailing addresses can be found in 4 different counties.

To assist in using this directory, included are:

A state map with regions, counties, and towns (page 706)
A city-county index (page 357)
A Standard Industrial Classification product index (page 149)

We ask for your comments, suggestions, and ideas to help make future directories more useful.
